Brett Stuart

President of Global AgriTrends

As co-founder and President of Global AgriTrends, Brett draws on a breadth of experience in market research, analysis and forecasting to inform stakeholders across the global meat trade landscape. He focuses on delivering insights that bring clarity to a variety of participants in the global agri-food sector.

Earlier in his career, Brett served as the lead economist for the U.S. Meat Export Federation. His experience includes an emphasis on research in the animal protein sector. He has conducted numerous research and analysis projects in the global meat trade area as well as advising government representatives on international protein trade issues. Brett's experience conducting on-the-ground agriculture industry research for a variety of clients on six continents brings a muti-stakeholder and global perspective to his analysis and forecasting work.

Raised on a cattle ranch operating in Utah and Wyoming, Brett earned an undergraduate degree in accounting at Utah State University and a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Nebraska. He and his wife Amanda live with their kids on a farm near Preston, Idaho.
