

Justin Sherrard

Global Strategist Animal Protein at Rabobank

Rabobank is the world's financial leader for the food and agribusiness sector. For RaboResearch Food & Agribusiness, 80+ analysts work in local teams all collecting information and spotting opportunities across all F&A sectors on a global scale.

Justin Sherrard leads a team of 15 analysts covering developments of all the major animal protein species and animal protein companies. He is responsible for the timely analysis of issues of strategic importance to animal protein companies around the world. Sherrard's work is directed at challenging current thinking and advising animal protein companies on emerging investment opportunities and risks shaping markets and growth.

Sherrard focusses on business opportunities in animal protein through, these include the uptake of new technologies and innovations, better access to growth markets, stronger supply chain models, and embracing sustainability practices.

Before Rabobank, he worked as an independent advisor to leading blue chip companies, not-for-profit organisations and governments, applying his knowledge of food and agribusiness, energy and natural resources issues, including on sustainability and climate change.

Sherrard has worked at Rabobank for more than a decade, covering markets in Europe, the United States, Latin America, Asia, New Zealand as well as his native Australia. He holds a Master's of Applied Science and Bachelor of Science from the University of New South Wales in Sydney, Australia.